

Württembergische Gemeinde-Versicherung a.G. (WGV), Stuttgart
Architects: hascher & jehle / ippolito fleitz group, Stuttgart

Württembergische Gemeinde-Versicherung a.G.
Tübinger Strasse 43
Stuttgart
Germany

Completed: 2008

Products:
silent rush

Maximum use of the space was used to create a building that guarantees naturally lit offices. Photos on this page: © Roland Halbe, Stuttgart Württembergische Gemeindeversicherung was established in Stuttgart in 1921. The company provides insurance cover for cities and communities as well as private persons in public service positions. For around 600 employees, a new office building was erected in the centre of Stuttgart. It was planned by architects hascher & jehle. The interior architecture of the customer centre was designed by ippolito fleitz.

Reception in the customer center.
Chairs: silent rush

Württembergische Gemeinde-Versicherung a.G. (WGV), Stuttgart
Architects: hascher & jehle / ippolito fleitz group, Stuttgart

Württembergische Gemeinde-Versicherung a.G.
Tübinger Strasse 43
Stuttgart
Germany

Completed: 2008

Products:
silent rush

The customer centre and main entrance covering 1000 square metres were designed by the ippolito fleitz group. In the large open space, meticulous customer guidance and acoustic discretion are especially important. Seating was provided in the form of silent rush office swivel chairs for the consultants and the associated silent rush cantilever chairs for visitors.

Photos: © Roland Halbe (top right), Zooley Braun (top left and right).

Württembergische Gemeinde-Versicherung a.G. (WGV), Stuttgart
Architects: hascher & jehle / ippolito fleitz group, Stuttgart

Württembergische Gemeinde-Versicherung a.G.
Tübinger Strasse 43
Stuttgart
Germany

Completed: 2008

Products:
silent rush

The various reception, consulting and waiting zones merge into each other. The corporate design of the insurance company was intelligently and modernly translated into architecture and the exterior effect was maximised by means of the furniture design and flexible lighting.

Photos on this page: © Zooney Braun, Stuttgart